

credit as her motivation to add "sex or marital status" to the provision barring discrimination on the basis of "race and age, and their status as veterans." Without informing the other committee members, Lindy inserted those words and made copies of the revision for her colleagues saying, "Knowing the Members composing this committee as well as I do, I'm sure it was just an oversight that we didn't have "sex" or "marital status" included. I've taken care of that and I trust it meets with the committee's approval." The bill passed unanimously, 47-0.

In 1976, she became the first woman to preside over a national political convention. In 1977, Lindy was elected to the House Committee on Appropriations at her retirement, she remained the longest serving member of that committee, serving for 12 years. That same year, she helped cofound the Congressional Women's Caucus and later served as its secretary. Throughout her career, Lindy maintained that the most important women's issues were economic, backing those causes. "The major issues of importance that I have worked on are economic ones; equal rights for women in business, banking and homeownership, the promotion of women in the workplace, better jobs in government and contracts, and equal opportunities for higher education, especially in science and medicine. Women vote with their pocketbooks . . . it boils down to that." Lindy was also a champion for civil rights in her diverse district. A political observer once noted, "She is the only white Congress Member representing a black voter majority in the United States."

In the early 1980's, Lindy was instrumental in the creation of the House Historian's Office. She helped create and served as a member of the Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families. From 1985 to 1989, she served as the chair of the Bicentenary of the United States House of Representatives. In July 1991, shortly after her retirement from Congress, the House named a room off the Rotunda in her honor, the Lindy Claiborne Boggs Congressional Women's Reading Room, of which she says, "I was always so proud that room was named for me because I felt that Abigail Adams had finally succeeded. She had asked her husband, John, to 'remember the ladies' when the Constitution was drafted or they would foment a revolution. He had not done so, and so their son's final resting place is now occupied by women and named for a woman."

Retirement did not slow Lindy down. She remained politically active and in 1994 authored her autobiography, Washington Through a Purple Veil. In 1997, President Clinton appointed the 81 year old as U.S. Ambassador to the Vatican, a position in which she served until 2001. In 2002, Congress honored Lindy for her "extraordinary service" to Louisiana and the country. The occasion marked the 25th anniversary of the Congressional Women's Caucus.

Of the accomplishments she is most proud of, she cites bills cosponsored on behalf minorities, women, and children; her efforts to improve education from the elementary to the college level; her work on the children's task force on crisis intervention; efforts to open the National Museum of African American Art in Washington, D.C.; establishing the Office of Historian of the House of Representatives; and achieving Margaret Chase Smith's dream of making the rose the national flower.

On a personal level, Mrs. Boggs mentored me in the ways of this institution, introduced me and so many others to the Appropriations Committee, and hosted me as our nation's Ambassador to the Vatican. She has served our nation with a grit and grace that demonstrates to us all what service can be. Lindy Boggs has become a legend in her own time. How privileged I am to be able to honor her 97th year anniversary of life and pay tribute to her honorable service to America and the world.
